

Last Sunday, dealing with what an enlightened humanity would do, I think we all enjoyed what people contributed. It's odd to think of us chickens changing the world, but, as they say, if not us, who? Beyond solving the world problematique, I look forward to being in good company, sharing whatever is on our plates. Pay attention to what comes up for you that might be of interest to others. Tell us your favorite books, quotes that live in your head, and however your rich library of knowledge and experience would apply to whatever we are saying.

The surprise I promised was what happened when I burned my finger on the heating element in my stove. I'd been given a phone number to call within the first half hour after getting a burn. As per instructions I'd been holding onto, I didn't put anything on it and I called the Fireburn Doctor: 818-332-6445. The pain started to go away when I hung up and after an hour, when I followed instructions to call back, my report was that it didn't hurt at all and there no longer was any welt – just some singed skin. It never was sore, didn't blister, and in a week or so the singed skin peeled off and fresh skin was underneath. You couldn't tell now that I had done anything. Save the number and call it if you burn yourself. You'll be asked for some I.D. info and told to just forget it. So folks, let me know if you do this. It is impossible and yet it works (I don't know how but want to find out), so I think of this as what could create a massive shift where we officially recognize the power of unseen forces. Once we get it that we're in a bigger picture than materialism affords, we'll be in winning territory.

As we create a dossier of what an enlightened world would be doing, there's a question of what to do first. I say that our greed-based worldview has us imploded in tension between the haves and the have-nots, and the world can't move until we have a more level playing field. The first thing I'd do would be to provide some version of UBI for the whole world. What would you do first? Let's talk about that next Sunday.

Our Zooms this month will be December 12th and 26th. Reminders will go out a day before, 2 hours before, and in a few minutes before.
