

I'm switching this Mighty Companions mailing list to Substack and this is the last mailing you'll get from Constant Contact.

I've been spending this last year out of public view and very active scouring the internet for what I can't find, which is conversation about how to get from where we are in our dysfunctional world to where we need to be. I'm coming back out and involving you all in what I've been doing and what I'm thinking, where I've got a whole dossier of what we-the-people could do to end-run around government that serves funders over constituents. Substack is a platform where we can think about that creatively together.

In addition to dealing with what we can do, I like sharing tips and hacks and best of bests that you'll get a dose of in each mailing.

A great thing I'm sharing here is coming up Wednesday. It's from The Scientific and Medical Network \(SMN\), the leading auspice in stretching the parameters of science to include what's outside the material world. There's a lot of interaction with outstanding people, which is rare, and I recommend everyone join. (Here's my podcast with the SMN Program Director, David Lorimer, a great light and a great ally.)

Wednesday, January 11, from 11:00 to 1:30 pacific time, David Lorimer will conduct a webinar that will be highly interactive on Zoom, with Brian Swimme, my main inspiration for how I see the world. Sign up here.

Watch for mail for Substack, coming soon!
