FREE TICKET TOMORROW!

Greg Palast, the greatest fighter against voter suppression, will show his new film, Vigilante: Georgia's Vote Suppression Hitman, at a gala at the Laemmle Royal in west Los Angeles tomorrow, Wednesday, Oct. 26, at 7 pm. It's being hosted by the ACLU and Black Voters Matter Fund and will be introduced by Martin Sheen and Jamie Foxx, and there will be a Q&A with Greg and others.

In addition to the Black Voters Matter Fund, The NAACP, the Rainbow PUSH Coalition, the New Georgia Project, and other grassroots groups are sponsoring showings in churches and community centers in Georgia. Greg's LA showing is aimed at generating funding and media support, including for showing the film in the dozen states that are using the "vigilante voter challenges" he uncovered.

Funding Greg also will support SaveMyVote2022.org, which directs voters how to save their ballot, and will pay for more videos like this short one from Yvette Nicole Brown.

RSVP here. A reserved ticket gets you in if they get so lucky and the theater fills. And pass this invite on. If you aren't coming to the LA show, here's a link to watch the film and to get info about how to support Greg and his non-profit Palast Investigative Fund: <https://watch.showandtell.film/watch/vigilante-ga>.
